

Website and Social Media Bio for Professional Freelance Writer

Hi, I'm Rachel Davis! But you can call me Rach!

Based in beautiful San Diego, California, I've been a professional freelance writer, copyeditor, illustrator, and social media manager for the past two years.

I've dedicated myself to helping success-driven individuals, professionals, and businesses communicate their messages clearly and effectively in all types of print and digital media. That's because I've always had an abiding passion for the English language, high-quality writing, and meticulous editing.

For this reason, my freelance editorial service has always been my dream job. And, thanks to wonderful telecommunications technologies, my dream job is now just like a little slice of heaven!

Because of global internet access and portable computers, I can now create my own work hours. I can also enjoy life as a digital nomad helping clients remotely from beautiful beaches in Brazil, Greece, Hawaii, or anywhere in the world.

But, unfortunately, right now, I'm not on a beautiful beach. That's because I'm currently studying creative writing at the University of California, San Diego, where I'll graduate next year with a bachelor's degree in English.

Although my heavy workload at UC San Diego is no day at the beach, I absolutely love to study the English language and further develop my writing skills. I take advantage of these skills to provide my clients with highly professional writing, copyediting, and proofreading.

If you're a high-achieving professional or business that would like help in communicating brilliantly, then let me show you how you can surely shimmer and shine like a bright star of excellence in the drab and dreary sky of marketing mediocrity.